Football controversy continues

Dear Editor:

The football season has ended for Carmel High School, yet the controversy continues, fed by a few disgruntled parents with an ax to grind. Twenty-two varsity players chose to play football, take discipline, criticism and endeavor to become better athletes, and nine chose to quit. The vote for Coach Molen and his staff was obviously 22 to 9.

Many players who quit were in the stands at last Saturdays' Gonzales game. Many had the class to congratulate the men who played after the game on a good performance. There is little animosity between these young men with different viewpoints, yet a few parents attempt to create a problem.

Coach Molen has been available every weekday during the season and every Thursday evening at the high school, when he volunteers his time to show films of the previous week's game to parents and discuss the game, air any problems and answer questions.

The parents who claim that Coach Molen has treated their "children" unfairly have never taken time to meet and talk with him, watch films or discuss the reasons that their boys quit.

In view of this, I personally feel they are more interested in publicity and creating dissension than they are in their boys' athletic careers. They want to be the mothers and fathers of "stars," not of young men developing discipline and character through participation in a team sport.

I would like to reiterate that only a few of the parents of boys who quit are responsible for the controversy. Most of the parents of these boys have more class, as do their children.

Supports Coach

Dear Editor:

In regards to a letter of complaint in the Nov. 12 issue: As a player on the Carmel High School football team, I disagree with her letter.

I think that Coach Molen did a good job of coaching our team this year. The team had some difficulties and disagreements throughout the season. But other than that, a lot of players on the team this year had fun.

Some of the players decided to quit the team, and I still have respect for those players even though they chose to quit the team. I don't think that an outsider has the right to put down Coach Molen, when she has no son on the team, or has never been to a game. Coach Molen did a fine job with this year's team.

Supports Fischer for chief

Dear Editor:

There is an obvious difference of opinion concerning the requirement for the city to conduct an outside recruitment drive to fill the position of police chief for Carmel.

The City Attorney says that there is no legal requirement . . . then why is it being done? Has pressure been applied by persons resenting past correction for their illegalities or their childrens', or by subordinates vexed by the necessary disciplinary actions taken to maintain a properly functioning police department?

Too often, resentments and jealousies have unnecessarily hampered the advancement of a dedicated public servant.

Captain Robert Fischer is a great deal more than a qualified police officer serving Carmel for 28 years. He is acquainted with the latest techniques in law enforcement, and has degrees from colleges and police academies (upper 10 percent of his graduating class from the FBI Academy).

Courses in narcotics control, juvenile control, public relations, public official protection, mob and riot control, finger printing, weapons, crowd control, police management, etc., etc., are part of his continuing education.

Further, Captain Fischer has a lifetime teaching credential in police science.

We have an exceptionally qualified police chief here and now. Why all the needless expense and time for outside recruitment? Carmel has traditionally honored its own; a qualified and dedicated public servant deserves our very best treatment and recognition!

No simple solution

Dear Editor:

Remember when there used to be simple solutions to simple problems? Then the legal profession persuaded us that we were incapable of solving any problem without going through the legalistic process of first complicating the problem, whatever it was, and then, laboriously, bereft of all reason, arriving at a solution so complex, so obscure, that a reasonable man would be hard put to identify it with the problem he began with. Government seems to thrive on this process.

Consider the case of Bob Fischer. The present chief, Bill Ellis, was appointed chief on the recommendation of his predecessor, Clyde Klaumann. It was a simple problem with a simple solution, and it gave the city of Carmel an excellent chief who has served the city well for the past five years.

Now Bill Ellis is retiring and he recommends the appointment of Bob Fischer as chief. It makes sense. Bob Fischer has had 28 years of experience on Carmel's police force. He knows the town, the people, the problems. He is liked and respected. He is capable and competent, and he deserves the recognition of his dedication to upholding the law in Carmel. This appointment would provide as a cap to his career. I'm convinced that if the citizens of Carmel could vote tomorrow on Bob Fischer's appointment as chief, there would be a resounding, unanimous yes!

But, guess what? We're going to complicate the problem, just like a big city! No hick town, simple solutions for us! We're going to advertise in newspapers around the country. That should bring in 500 to 1000 applicants. If you were a cop in Detroit, wouldn't Carmel look like Shangri-La to you?

Developing criteria, processing, interviewing, etc., could easily use up $100,000 of city employee time. And for what?

Before we embark on this mad quest, Oh council members and city administrator, let's take a second look at the simple, sensible solution to a simple problem.

Appoint Bob Fisher police chief of Carmel.

Supports Captain Fischer

Dear Editor:

I have considered Carmel my home since I first lived here in 1951, even though — like many residents — I have had to live elsewhere from time to time. I have followed Carmel's progress, as well as its growth and its politics, for a number of years. There have been times in the past that I had momentary doubts, but somehow I always had faith that somehow we would muddle through.

Your issue of Nov. 12, therefore, came as a shock, for it revealed that this time we may not. The matter of succession of the police chief both alarms and astounds me.

Capt. Frances P. Fischer, better known to us as Bob, has endured all these years of public service, and often whipping boy as he carried out his duty for others; years of service on the "graveyard" shift; years of service on weekends when most residents were able to enjoy their families; and, most important of all, years of slowly rising through the ranks to where he should now be appointed chief of police.

I do not know our city administrator personally, but the image he now projects is that of one who has few personal powers to exert, and now that he has one, by gosh, he's going to play every last card to the hilt!

He is, it would appear, being goaded into this activity by at least two city councilmen who are more conscious of their positions than their jobs. One is widely known as "anti-police," and the second one has long been known as "anti-anything," as long as it produces personal publicity.

Carmel has a fine police department, and it deserves fine leadership. It is my opinion that Capt. Fischer can provide this leadership and deserves the opportunity to prove he is capable of it. To deny him this opportunity is not only an insult to him, but all those who love and treasure the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Why Jeffers sold property

Dear Editor:

In your issue of Nov. 5, under the heading "25 Years Ago," you report: "Jeffers sells four lots to pay taxes . . ." The brief article which follows is inaccurate on at least two counts, and these I wish to correct.

My father, Robinson Jeffers did, indeed, sell several lots at the north end of his property at that time, but of these only one was bought by Mr. and Mrs. Max Forstl, not four, as reported in your article.

Secondly, he did not make the sales to secure money for the payment of taxes. He was traveling in Europe with my family and me in the summer of 1956, and I well remember the circumstances. The Carmel Planning Commission, or some such body, published a master plan for future land use in Carmel and its environs.

This included a map which was published in the paper and which a friend sent to us in Ireland. This map showed the entire block, which my father then owned, as "The Robinson Jeffers Memorial Park and Library," and this so much distressed him that we cut short our travels and, at the cost of considerable trouble and expense, returned immediately to Carmel.

He then sold the lots in question for the reason that this would make the property less attractive and because having to deal with several owners rather than one would make it more difficult for a public body endeavoring to make a compulsory purchase.

He often complained of and deplored the high property taxes he had to pay, but at that time, at any rate, he was perfectly well able to meet them.

Del Monte Forest LCP

Dear Editor:

The latest draft of the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Plan will come before the Board of Supervisors on Nov. 23. Its proposals for land use bear little resemblance to the plans earlier drawn up by a citizens' committee and the county's planning staff. Instead it appears to embody the fondest wishes of the Pebble Beach Corporation.

This new plan calls for nearly 1500 housing units in addition to those which will someday be built on about 400 existing unbuilt lots of record, and for a 270-room resort hotel at Spanish Bay.

The proposed housing units will not only place great demands on the already overburdened road system, but will also reduce existing open space and threaten the botanically important Morse Reserve.

The resort at Spanish Bay may be sited just 200 yards from the shoreline, instead of back in the old sand plant area as the earlier plan specified.

Is this what the residents of our beautiful coast want in the Del Monte Forest? I hope not, and I urge all citizens who value the scenic quality of the forest and shore to write to the Board of Supervisors or to attend the Nov. 23 hearing and to make their voices heard.

Restrooms needed

Dear Editor:

I think it is disgraceful that Carmel doesn't have public facilities for out-of-town visitors, even if they don't care about the residents who might like to use them.

When the city almost built them with a bust stop in Devendorf Park I rejoiced, only to have my spirits lowered again with the change of mind. Then I thought the Piccadilly property would be great but I'm not at all sure this will come to pass either. The city has certainly made a terrible sight of that lot and I don't see why it has taken so long to decide what to do with it.

It would have been nicer if the city had left it as it was until the decision had been made instead of creating such an eyesore in the middle of town.

I still think rest rooms would be most appropirate on this site, with a couple of signs on Ocean Avenue — "W.C." or "Rest Rooms" — showing the location.

I have traveled considerably out of the country and just returned from four weeks in Germany and Austria. Every town has easy-to-find public rest rooms. I have snapshots showing the "Damen and Herren" at a tourist spot in Austria. An older man and woman were in charge of these. You can see him sitting at a little table where the 10¢, 15¢, or 20¢ was collected — prices varied from place to place. This couple took care of the facilities, keeping them clean and supplied.

Carmel is so interested in making money, as evidenced by its need to have parking limits even on Sundays, that this should be looked upon as a good, easy source of revenue. There should be plenty of "take" to pay a "caretaker."

In Avignon, France, there was a man handling both men's and women's toilets and he sold items like candy, gum, cigarettes, etc. also. Carmel could go in for coffee and doughnuts or tea and crumpets.

At the zoo in Rome there was a woman in charge. Paris has done away with the pissoirs but now has large "W.C." signs at the entrances to the subway. Why must Carmel be so backward?

Why parking is still a problem in Carmel

By AL EISNER

I DETECT a certain irony in the General Plan proposals about a parking structure for Sunset Center. A lot of talk is going on. Valuable time is being spent. Facts and figures are being accumulated. But, as yet, there is no clear consensus among the five members of the city council that we really need — and want — additional parking facilities in Carmel.

It may sound a little weird at first, but on closer inspection, the argument that "we don't want more parking facilities in Carmel" has a certain attractive — if misguided — logic.

The argument goes like this: If we provide more parking spaces, we will only succeed in attracting more automobiles, thereby inviting more traffic, more pollution, more congestion.

The reason the city has moved so slowly on the whole parking question is that the council really doesn't seem to want more parking. Because of the constant outcry from frustrated local residents and business people, the council cleverly pays lip service to the idea of providing parking spaces. Studies are commissioned. Hearings are sometimes held. And then the subject dies . . . again.

As the General Plan process proceeds, it will be interesting to see if the city is finally forced to do something about parking.

Before a lot of additional energy is spent on the issue, the members of the city council should discuss the issue at an open meeting. If there is a commitment to do something about it, then a solution will be found. Carmel is rich in resources and ideas. We'll find a way if the will is there.

After sidestepping another thorny issue — second kitchens — the council finally found the solution — legalize them. They found the courage to do it, though, only after the Coastal Commission said it was an acceptable way to provide affordable housing in Carmel.

General Plan sparks lively discussion

CARMEL SHOULD sell the Piccadilly property and other city-owned real estate and use the funds to finance construction of a parking garage at Sunset Center.

So suggested Jody LeTowt of Carmel to the General Plan Advisory Committee during a "town hall" meeting last Thursday at Sunset Center sponsored by the Carmel Citizens Committee.

"The city should consider a program to divest itself of the Piccadilly property in the next 30 days, and the rest of city property in the next three years," LeTowt said.

"I don't think it's right for the city to be speculating in real estate. Those funds could be used for a parking garage."

Carmel City Councilwoman Helen Arnold said the city's ownership of real estate could prove to be a good hedge against future financial difficulties if hotel-motel tax revenues decline.

About 40 persons attended the "town hall" meeting which was called specifically to seek public comment on, and involvement with, the revision of the general plan.

Earth Metrics, the Burlingame consulting firm hired by the city to revise the general plan, is to present specific proposals in key areas of the plan for consideration prior to a Nov. 19 special joint meeting of the City Council, Planning Commission, and General Plan Advisory Committee.

Traffic congestion, parking, commercial restraints, and open space were topics of considerable interest at the meeting, as they have been at sessions of the advisory committee.

Councilman Frank Lloyd said the proposed Canada de la Segunda Road, which would link Carmel Valley Road with the Monterey-Salinas highway, should be revived for active consideration as an alternative to the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

"The Canada de la Segunda Road has been sidetracked," Lloyd said. "But the changing political situation in Monterey County makes the situation more viable now. It would provide a very easy means for getting from Carmel Valley to Monterey."

Councilman Lloyd said he is "sure" that the right-of-way for the road would be available.

Former Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson also spoke in favor of the Canada de la Segunda Road to relieve traffic congestion at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

"It would relieve a lot of the upper Valley traffic and would help with congestion," Anderson said. "We're going to have development. We just need some kind of extra relief from that jamming up and down the highway."

John Logan, a Carmel Planning Commission member, said he is "strongly opposed" to construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway — a controversial project for years in Carmel, and one which has been officially opposed by the City Council.

CITY ADMINISTRATOR Doug Peterson noted that the Hatton Canyon Freeway project has been assigned a low priority by the State Highway Department, which makes construction in the near future unlikely.

The Hatton Canyon Freeway would stretch from the intersection of Highway 1 and Carpenter Street in Carmel through Hatton Canyon to connect with Carmel Valley Road just east of Highway 1.

Mayor Barney Laiolo urged a high priority for provision of parking facilities at Sunset Center to relieve parking problems in the residential areas generated by day workers in the business district.

"We should have done it 10 years ago," Laiolo said. "We could have four levels of parking without even reaching the elevation of San Carlos Street. We could form a parking district to finance it. There are many people in the parking business who build these structures and operate them on a land lease basis."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold told the committee she is "not opposed" to a parking garage at Sunset Center. "I hope to be able to use all-day parking spaces to relieve the all-day workers," Mrs. Arnold.

Gordon Campbell, a member of the advisory committee, remarked that only 11 percent of the employees in the Carmel business district are Carmel residents, and noted that "2,000 cars come into the business district every day."

After the meeting, City Administrator Peterson said there are means to finance a major parking facility at Sunset Center without federal funds, but he predicted that such a project would be enormously expensive.

"The city could pledge a portion of the hostelry tax proceeds to the payment of a bond issue for a parking facility," Peterson said. "It could be done as a special revenue bond, or through lease buy-back and purchase agreements.

"A parking facility of that type would be a very heavy financial commitment on the city's part. With a $2 to $3 million structure, you'd be concentrating a considerable portion of the city's resources in one project."

Parking fees would not be adequate to amortize a parking garage at Sunset Center, Peterson estimated.

Willard Newman of Carmel agreed with Mayor Laiolo's endorsement of a parking facility at Sunset Center, and asked whether precise cost figures could be developed.

JANE MAYER, an advisory committee member, said she feared that a multi-level parking garage at Sunset Center might be a breeding ground for crime.

"I wouldn't want to park in a Sunset garage if I were shopping in Carmel," she said.

"We're talking about spending millions of dollars to provide a few hundred parking spaces for the 2,000 cars which come in every day," said committee alternate Gene Hammond. "I don't think a parking structure at Sunset makes any sense at all."

The perennial problem of traffic circulation and congestion in the business district triggered various suggestions, among them the possibility of closing off certain downtown streets.

But Mayor Laiolo expressed skepticism about that idea.

"We tried the mall concept over a three-day holiday once in 1971," Laiolo said. "We blocked off the area from San Carlos to Monte Verde on Ocean. The problem is, at some point you have to let trucks through for unloading. I don't think the mall idea would ever work."

Councilwoman Arnold told the committee the general plan might be revised to allow amortization of motels in the R-1 residential district.

"The motels in the R-1 district could be turned into senior citizen housing, which possibly could be subsidized," Mrs. Arnold said. "I have a feeling that many of the ills of Carmel are based on greed."

WHITE OAKS condominiums are under construction in Carmel Valley Village, and the first 10 units of the 38-unit project are due to go on the market by the first of the new year, according to developer Jerome Romis. An appeal of the condo project's septic system was recently denied by the State Water Quality Control Board. Prices of the two-bedroom units will range from $220,000 to $285,000. Contractor is Daniels and House Construction Co. of Monterey. (George Smith photo).

The speculators' Master Plan for Carmel

Dear Editor:

As the General Plan revision process is gradually unfolding in various meetings around town, it might be of some value for all of us who call this village "home" to contemplate the message in the enclosed poem.

And, because the next meeting in this on-going series will be Thursday evening, Nov. 19 at 7:00 p.m. at Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall, you might take this opportunity to urge all public spirited citizens to come out and join with the City Council, Citizens Advisory Committee, Planning Commission, city staff members, and the General Plan consultants in these important discussions.

The enclosed poem is the effort of Patti Curnow, a Carmel resident, artist, and businesswoman.

THE SPECULATORS' MASTER PLAN

They have more safeguards than a citadel against speculators in quaint Carmel.
The watchdog called the Land Use Committee defy expansion of their fair little city, and if we happen to slip one through we get check-mated by Design Review.
Even the developers' finest logician can't figure a way past the Planning Commission.
Their short-sighted thinking can't be denied.
They've foiled every devious plan we've tried so we'll let the residents judge us and see if we had our way — just what Carmel could be.

Scenic could be the Prize of all Prizes;
beautiful condos, a mile of high-rises.
We'll redo the beach to the tourists' demands, with carnival rides and 60 food stands.
San Antonio should be razed of houses and trees and replaced with parking for cars and RVs.
If the gambling laws of our State ever mellow then Harrahs and Harveys can develop Carmelo.

Camino Real is the most perfect spot for nightclubs, pornos, and a rent-a-car lot.
Of course, the Pine Inn would naturally go,
it's the obvious site for a 2-block disco.
Village Corner to P.O. our master plan mentions will hold 900 rooms to handle conventions.
Davendorf Park will be easy to sell as a site for McDonald's and of course, Taco Bell.
And now that the Mission is so out of place
we'll make it a track where horses can race.
With natural growth some crime will prevail
so convert Sunset Center into a new jail.
We can't keep the downtown quaint or too small,
our plans call for neon and a big covered mall.
Your old fashioned Festival devoted to Bach we'll immediately change into profit with Rock.

We've heard you complain of the shame of it all,
the petty restrictions of your City Hall, so let's 'Out' with the old, 'In' with the new and progress can bring all its glory to you.

If you're still undecided on which way to go we've an ace up our sleeve that will sway you we know, up on the highway, in gratitude, we'll invest in an arch that reads . . "WELCOME . . . MIAMI BEACH WEST"

New water board members differ :

What did the election really mean?

By ROBERT MISKIMON

PHILOSOPHICAL differences over construction of a small dam on the upper Carmel River will undoubtedly come into sharp focus after three newly-elected board members are seated Dec. 14 on the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

They are incumbents Nancy McClintock of Seaside and Ed Lee of Carmel Valley — both re-elected to four-year terms of office — and Carmel Valley attorney Zan Henson, who won a two-year seat on the board.

Lee has consistently advocated construction of a small dam on the upper river. McClintock has taken a wait-and-see attitude until dam studies are complete. Henson campaigned vigorously against development of another dam.

There is not only a philosophical split among those board members on the dam issue, but also in their interpretation of the importance of the dam question in the Nov. 3 election results.

Director Ed Lee, for instance, disagrees with many political observers that the election was "a referendum on the dam issue," and feels that the personalities of the candidates and other water-related issues weighted just as significantly as the dam question.

However, even if the election was, in fact, a dam referendum, Lee argues that the voters expressed a preference for a dam, and not in opposition to a dam.

"The election wasn't a clean vote on a dam," Lee asserted. "But the pro-dam candidates got more votes than the anti-dam candidates. The undecided vote was almost 20 percent, and when all the information on a dam comes out, I feel the support will be for a dam."

Lee said he measured the "undecided" vote in terms of the votes cast for McClintock, who received 6,583 votes.

A combination of the votes unofficially tallied by the Monterey County Elections Department for the three "pro-dam" candidates (Ed Lee, Don Durant, Russel Hansen) amounts to 14,363, Lee noted.

That's more votes than the "anti-dam" candidates (Janice O'Brien, Zan Henson, Michael Pekin, Roy Daniels) collected, a total of 13,537 votes.

Lee figures the voters gave a 51.5 percent margin of approval to the pro-dam candidates, as compared with 48.5 percent support for all anti-dam candidates.

Measured by the number of voter precincts carried by himself, as compared with those carried by Henson, Lee sees an even clearer indication of support for a pro-dam position.

THE NUMBER of precincts carried by Russel Hansen was 29, compared with 28 for Zan Henson, a fact which Lee also says supports his analysis that the election did not give a clear anti-dam mandate.

"When people see all the alternatives, I think they will come out and say that a dam is the best way to go," Lee asserted. "Both Nancy McClintock and I got a higher percentage of votes than what was cast for the formation of the district in 1978.

"To me, this is a vote of confidence for the direction of the board, which is to get more information on a dam. My interpretation of the election is that the voters think the board is on the right track in getting more information on a dam."

There is no clear majority on the board — even with Henson's election — for a dam, Lee said. "The board is split about 50-50 on a dam," he said. Henson will replace Director John Williams, who is regarded as opposed to a dam.

But Zan Henson, not surprisingly, disagreed with Lee's assessment of the election results.

"Basically, the vote reflects the fact that the incumbents were re-elected," Henson said. "There was no incumbent in my two-year seat, so that was the most neutral race in terms of outside influences. Therefore, the dam was the key issue in the election.

"The election results indicate that more than 50 percent of the people are opposed to a dam."

It would be a mistake to read the results of the Henson-Hansen race strictly in terms of no-dam vs. dam, Henson said.

"As I read Hansen's literature, I didn't get the impression he was pro-dam," Henson said. "So I don't think his was a pro-dam vote."

Like Lee, Henson figures the "undecided" members of the board as well as the public will be swayed by the results of dam studies recently authorized by the board. But Henson believes their decision will be opposed to, rather than in support of, a dam.

When he is seated, Henson plans to seek a re-evaluation of water reclamation potential for the Monterey Peninsula. He feels that a recent analysis of water reclamation alternatives to a dam "were badly skewed against reclamation."

"They compared the cost of dam water at a dam with the cost of reclamation water at the reclamation plant," Henson said. "That doesn't take into account costs of transportation. Given that kind of analysis, a dam will always appear cheaper."

Henson said he hopes the board will give serious consideration to reclamation and conservation as alternatives to construction of another dam.

County eyes possible major cut in Carmel Library funding

THE HARRISON Memorial Library stands to lose as much as half of its budget next year under a proposed revision of the county revenue allocation formula.

Implications of that new revenue formula for the Carmel library will be discussed by the board of directors at 4 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 24 in Carmel City Hall.

Librarian Peg Richter said the formula could reduce county assistance to the library by about $140,000, from the current $160,000 to about $22,000.

The new formula was proposed by a consultant to the county but has not been adopted by the Board of Supervisors, which is the policy-making body for expenditure of all county funds.

The Carmel library's revenue allocation has been based primarily upon the fact that about half its clientele comes from unincorporated areas which surround Carmel, Ms. Richter said.

"We've been informed that the allocation for 1982-83 will be based on what the county can afford to pay city libraries, which isn't necessarily what it costs us to provide services," she said.

That means that the library board could eliminate all services to county residents if county revenues are severely slashed, or drastically curtail services to all clients, Ms. Richter said.

The board of directors may take a position Nov. 24 on the proposed revenue formula and forward it to the Board of Supervisors. The meeting is open to the public.

Parents offer reward for return of missing Carmel Valley woman

PARENTS of 35-year-old Lorna Worth of Carmel Valley have offered a reward for her safe return.

Stanley and Darby Worth made the offer with a no-questions-asked assumption their daughter — who has been missing for two weeks — had been kidnapped.

The Carmel Valley woman was reported missing Nov. 3 when she failed to report for work at a Monterey massage parlor.

Ms. Worth was seen by a friend Halloween night (Oct. 31), and reportedly said she was on her way to her residence at 55 Paso Mediano in Carmel Valley Village.

An attendant at a local Texaco station said she may have bought a few gallons of gas early Sunday morning, according to her father, Stanley Worth.

Her white, 1963 Lincoln Continental was found abandoned early Tuesday at a shopping center in Greenfield. Her car keys and other personal effects were found inside the vehicle, Worth said.

"We're convinced she was kidnapped," Worth said. "The door to her place wasn't forced, which means she must have known the person. She wouldn't have opened the door to a stranger.

"I'm convinced she was kidnapped."

Monterey County Sheriff's Detective Don Smythe said there few leads in the case, which is still classified as a missing person incident.

"I don't suspect kidnapping," Detective Smythe said. "I don't have enough evidence to suspect anything. We don't know if she went off on a spree; she has done that before. It is very suspicious."

Worth said the release of his daughter and the collection of the reward can be arranged by calling him at 624-7494, or Detective Don Smythe at the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, 373-0613.

MISSING since Oct. 31 from her Carmel Valley home is 35-year-old Lorna Worth. Her parents have offered a reward for her safe return.

C.V. property owners seek alternate service center site

A SPECIAL committee of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association will scour the Valley in search of an alternative location for a proposed service center.

CVPOA board of directors member Richard Nimmons will head the committee which will try to find another spot for the center originally planned for construction near the intersection of Carmel Valley and Valley Vista roads.

The CVPOA board decided to become involved with the project because of complaints from residents in the area, and because of the acknowledged need for such a center in the Valley, Nimmons said.

In other business, the CVPOA board of directors accepted a list of nominees for officers of the board as well as eight candidates for four board vacancies last Wednesday.

The election will be held by mail ballots, and winners will be installed at the annual membership meeting Jan. 6 at Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

Recommended for officers by the nominating committee are: Dick Dalsemer, president; Robert Greenwood, vice-president; Lynn Morris, treasurer; Barbara Olson, recording secretary; Jacqueline Marks, corresponding secretary.

The candidates for four board vacancies are Richard Abbott, Peter Coakley, Doral Eardley, Jerry Foote, Ed Hubbard, Mary Ann Matthews, Ed Corbin, and Dick Nimmons.

The next CVPOA board meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 9 at Los Laureles Lodge. A presentation on plans for development of the 562-acre Canada Segunda project in Carmel Valley is on the agenda.

Brush burn season opens, permits required

Fire departments in Carmel Valley encourage local residents to begin voluntary weed abatement soon to help prevent brush fires next summer.

From Dec. 1 through March 31, residents will be allowed to burn trash and brush on "burn days," but only with fire department-issued permits.

The Mid-Carmel Valley, Carmel Valley and Rio Road Fire Stations will issue door yard burning permits 8 a.m.-5 p.m. daily during the burn season.

For information regarding burn permits or brush clearance regulations phone the Mid-Carmel Valley Fire Department, 624-5907; Carmel Valley Fire Department, 659-2021; or the Rio Road Fire Department, 624-4511.

CUSD tries pilot program to improve spelling skills

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IN THE CARMEL Unified School District, it's not so much a question of why Johnny can't read, as it is why Johnny can't spell.

This year, a pilot program is underway in several elementary level classrooms in the district which employs new approaches to the age-old dilemma of teaching kids to spell.

Spelling is one area of academic achievement in which the district has fared worse than others in standardized testing. Recent results of the California Assessment Program showed the district's mean sixth grade spelling score below the state mean score for sixth graders.

In most other subjects at various grade levels, Carmel Unified School District students continued to rank higher than state median scores. Spelling, however, remains a bugaboo.

Curriculum Director Rich Hawkins said the district has placed special emphasis on spelling achievement for the last five years, but a new direction in the way spelling is taught was started with the pilot program this year.

About five years ago, the district developed its own spelling word lists when administrators and staff found the traditional spelling workbooks to be too costly and ineffective, Hawkins said.

"The workbooks we were using had a lot of useful language activities, but they didn't help much with spelling," he said. "And the cost of consumable workbooks was too high for us to afford."

With a 15-member special teachers' spelling committee, the district developed its own method of spelling instruction.

"We decided to go for an approach based on word lists," Hawkins said. "We researched the words that formed the backbone of many spellers and made up a list, which was revised several times."

The district's word lists were used to develop tests which used the words, and new words were added quarterly to the lists. The results were less than staggering, Hawkins confided.

"We weren't getting very far in terms of our achievement," he said. "On both the California Assessment Program and the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills our spelling scores have remained lower than our other scores."

The district's spelling difficulties were evident not only to classroom teachers, but particularly to a part-time aide employed by the district to read and grade written compositions.

"We surveyed our teachers to see what they were doing on a day-to-day basis in the spelling area. Then we surveyed other districts who had successful spelling programs to see what they were doing," Hawkins said.

"WE FOUND that a word list simply isn't enough because it still leaves the student alone with the list, and doesn't require the teachers to teach that much."

School district with good spelling results were those in which teachers were actively engaged in teaching spelling, and where students were actively engaged in learning. Regular, systematic spelling exercises were also characteristic of districts with good spelling results.

"When the teachers are actively involved in teaching spelling, it places a certain value in the kids' minds about the importance of spelling. The succecssful districts did things that showed the students they valued spelling."

The district has a committee charged with finding ways to make students more aware of the importance of spelling, but while the committee does its work, a pilot educational package has been put into operation.

It's called Direct Instruction Spelling, and it's a product of Science Research Associates of Chicago. The system employs all the methods of teacher and student involvement which have worked in other districts, plus some new approaches to understanding the mechanics of words, Hawkins said.

CARMELO SCHOOL teacher Shirley Graham uses the Direct Instruction Method to teach spelling to her combined fourth and fifth grade students, under a pilot program in use this year in the Carmel Unified School District. The program may be expanded next year to help improve poor district performance on state spelling tests. (Robert Miskimon photo).

Because it is a new educational package, Science Research Associates was willing to donate a complete set of materials to the district for one classroom at the second, third, fourth and fifth grade levels. There are six teachers working with the program this fall.

"It's a highly structured program organized in a very sequential way," Hawkins said. "It requires teachers to be involved in spelling every day. There's a continuous dialogue with students, rather than kids silently working in a workbook, which is what we did 10 years ago."

The program uses three approaches to spelling: phonemic, or sound-symbol; morphemic, or meaning-symbol; and whole word, which primarily relies on memorization.

The result is that students are able to learn whole clusters of words, and to perceive inter-relationships between words, instead of memorizing each word as an individual entity, Hawkins said.

"Spelling is a strange kind of skill," Hawkins said. "Some people believe you're either a speller or not. The idea of this program is that everybody can be taught to be a reasonably good speller.

"People approach spelling differently. Some approach it visually; some remember sequences of sounds. You've got learners that are very different in how they process sound symbols. Good teachers develop a program with something for everybody in it."

THE PILOT program "eliminates a lot of guesswork" in spelling "because it gives you the mechanisms of how words are put together," Hawkins said.

Once a student has a command of morphemes, or meaning units — such as affixes — then construction of complete words by using those building blocks can proceed easily, Hawkins said.

The program is being used this year by Tularcitos School teachers Marilyn Bjonerud, Imogene Speiser, Herb Reuter, and Judi Leavelle. Melinda Douglas and Shirley Graham at Carmelo School are also using the program.

Shirley Graham actually started to use the new method last year, but shifted to the revised program materials supplied by Science Research Associates this fall. She teaches a combined third and fourth-grade class of 29 children at Carmelo School.

She reported that students seem motivated to learn spelling, and said preliminary results of their efforts are encouraging.

"Spelling is usually taught by the whole word method," Ms. Graham said. "With this method, if the student learns the morphemes, then they can spell lots of words."

As part of the instructional method, students must listen to the teacher and respond orally. Speed and repetition are emphasized in the daily classroom drills.

"Everybody spells all at once," she said. "I don't call on individual children unless I'm sure they know the word."

There are old-fashioned spelling bees, spelling bingo games, and other devices to reinforce learning. Twenty to 30 minutes is set aside each day for spelling, Ms. Graham said.

"Spelling has to be taught," she said. "It has to be done through writing. I've found that children who are good readers are good spellers. With this method, kids learn to break words down into meaning units."

The Mayor's Report

Key General Plan meeting tonight

By BARNEY LAIOLO

I would like to start my article this week by correcting an error in last week's paper . . . . The correct date for the next General Plan meeting is Thursday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m. at Carpenter Hall in Sunset Center. This meeting will be a combined assembly of the City Council, the Planning Commission, the Advisory Panel and representatives of Earth Metrics, the consultants preparing the General Plan. Hope you will be there.

I wish to thank the Carmel Citizens Committee and William Doolittle in particular for a well run Town Meeting on the General Plan held at Sunset Center on the 12th. Approximately 50 people were in attendance and many subjects wre covered. I'm happy to see more people showing interest as these meetings progress.

One subject which seemed to invite considerable discussion dealt with the possibility of a parking facility at north field of Sunset Center. Several ideas wre introduced and I feel that further studies should be done regarding this project.

I have been working on various ideas which could be incorporated into a plan for the use of this site (i.e. parking, living quarters for older residents and either a park or landscaped recreation area at the level of San Carlos Street.) Hopefully, something will come forth that will help relieve some of the parking problems which have been with us for so long.

Much discussion arose about the cost of such a project. I would like to mention some of the various ways this could be accomplished. A Parking District could be set up, whereby owners of property would contribute funds for the construction of the parking facility. Another plan would be to "ground lease" the 200-foot by 225-foot site to a private concern which would build and operate the facility on a long-term basis.

In this plan the city benefits in two ways: public parking is provided; and at the end of the lease period the structure is turned over to the city. No matter what time element is involved, the city never loses title to the land.

A housing section could be incorporated on the Mission Street side to reduce the feeling of bulk in the total structure. Will keep you informed.

On Tuesday evening, I attended the school board meeting at the high school and am happy to report that the agreement for the joint city and school district use of our gymnastic equipment was approved. Hopefully this is only the beginning of more joint ventures by both entities.

I was very pleased to see the good turnout of supporters for the FOCUS (Friends of the Carmel Unified School District) Evening with Allen Funt. Mr. Funt is to be congratulated for donating his time and talents to help our schools. The "After Glo" at the Women's Club proved very successful and spirited as well . . . . Those who didn't stay to the end missed the unexpected appearance of Mike Marotta, Bucky MeGoeghogen, Joe Ingram and Sam Schuman, who joined Mary Ingram and entertained the group with great music until 12:30. Many thanks to them for their part and also the committee responsible for the total presentation.

With so much talk about traffic lately, remember that the chance of a pedestrian getting an even break depends on where the car hits him.

Smilin' on,
Mayor Barney

Inventor readies perpetual motion watch

By FLORENCE MASON

There is an inventor among us, and his product is nearly ready for marketing!

Marian Niculescu is a watch and clock repair man with jeweler Henri Corbat. Niculescu is working on a "perpetual motion" watch, one that will always work — without winding, even if it is left stationary for years at a time. Niculescu is close to having a prototype ready: "Give me six months or so," he said. He is looking for a patent attorney.

In the meantime he repairs watches and clocks at Corbat's jewelry store on San Carlos near Fifth. Born in Rumania, Niculescu may be the youngest watchmaker ever; he started at six. "I had broken maybe a dozen clocks or watches for my mother," he said, "so she took me to the local watchmaker and had him teach me how to put them back together correctly."

Niculescu has been in this country for 7½ years. He came to Carmel via Fort Ord, where he had worked in his craft as a civilian for three years. One day recently he "just walked into Corbat's" and got himself his present job.

He had fine training for his work, including 4½ years in Switzerland. And that was the result of winning a competition for watchmakers!

Comings and goings on the Carmel business scene are easily compared to the ebb and flow of ocean tides. When one business goes out, another soon comes in . . .

Some current ebbings and flowings:

Cosmetiques, on the east side of Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, went out of business last month. The new occupant of that space, as of the end of November, will be Carmel Collectables. In turn, there will be a vacancy in the Plaza Mini Mall where Brad Boggan's shop has been located.

Boggan said that he is making the move to improve the shop's visibility and also for the more than double space it affords. He'll continue to offer small antiques, estate jewelry, coins and other collectables. One of his specialties is medals — not the military ones, but those commemorating special events such as Presidential inaugurations. Boggan has a special interest in jewelry as an investment and in investment planning; that's the direction his work may take in the future.

Carmel Collectables opened in the Mini Mall in January, 1980, when Boggan came here from Santa Barbara. He said, "I came by this interest naturally. My grandfather was in the same business and I took a liking to it."

Boggan lives in Carmel Valley. He is active with the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees; right now he's playing basketball with them and looking forward to his favorite sport next spring — baseball.

It's Carmel 1, Tahoe 0 in another move involving the Mini Mall, one that brings a new custom-made jewelry business to Carmel. That's The Sierra Goldsmith, coming into the space vacated by Seahorse Gallery and Gifts. That is, if owner Dale McFarlane can clear up electric, gas and venting problems identified by City Building Inspector Ron Warren.

McFarlane will be making gold and special-order gem jewelry on the premises and that requires the use of equipment not usually found in the smaller Plaza shops. It is all very familiar to McFarlane, however, as he has been doing the same kind of work for 11 years at Lake Tahoe. He solved similar problems there and is optimistic about his ability to solve them here — with the help of Carmel's efficient building department.

Why the move to Carmel? "I got tired of kicking snowbanks!" McFarlane said. "You can't kick fogbanks." He added, "It's beautiful here, I love it. I think you've got Tahoe beat!" He also said that people have been wonderful — "I haven't met a nasty person yet." That remark elicited a comment from Police Chief Ellis at the Business License Code Review Board meeting: "We have an ordinance against that, too!"

The Sierra Goldsmith is a one-man shop with a limited inventory; McFarlane expects to be continuously busy doing special order work — either handmade or cast. Because it is a specialty shop, not a standard gift shop, the BLCRB did not have to deal with any problems under the city's land use change moratorium.

McFarlane, a bachelor now living in Carmel, is a man of many interests. Sailing is one of them, and that's another reason for his choice of this area for his permanent home. He had his own boat at Tahoe and racing is one of his favorite activities, one he hopes to continue on Monterey Bay. He was also delighted to find that there is an ice skating rink in Marina, as he has been a professional skater and a member of the Ice Capades cast.

Under the heading of flow, not ebb: plans for expansion of a resident-oriented local business were approved with pleasure by the BLCRB. Emilio and Connie Colarusso are taking over additional space in the Cortile San Remo (Lincoln between Fifth and Sixth) for their Sewing Arts business. The original establishment is upstairs in the court, the addition is downstairs where Village Photography had been. Members of the BLCRB were delighted to hear of a "locally useful business" — dressmaking and the retail sale of original designs — that is doing so well.

When I called Connie Colarusso she was busy fitting a customer — a visitor to Carmel. I asked if she serves many visitors as well as the Carmel residents who find their way to Colarusso's Sewing Arts. "Yes, we do," she said, "there are several shops in town that refer customers to us. We're community oriented."

The shop has been the Colarussos' full-time activity here for about three years; before that they operated a similar business in Westchester, New York. They have three children: Frank, who handles public relations for the San Jose Earthquakes

One of Mrs. Colarusso's specialties is monogramming and they were running out of space for that activity as well as needing additional workers right there where Colarusso can work along with them. "We're attached to our customers," Mrs. Colarusso said, "we didn't want to lose any of them for lack of space." Nor will they, now.

The Collection, in Carmel Valley Village, is another instance of an avocation becoming a business. In this case, a family business.

Pat and Jim Poile (there's an accent over the "e") are the owners of this new shop in White Oaks Plaza. They are selling art (including some find reproductions), antiques and furnishings: clocks, larger decorative pieces, mirrors, Persian rugs . . . many of the items are one-of-a-kind. It is an extension of their "hobby, fun and entertainment" during many years of visiting museums and art galleries.

The couple has four sons. Their eldest, Jim, is working in the store. Another son and his wife are moving to this area to assist. A third lives in Cairo, and thus the Poiles have their own import business out of Egypt. Some of the handmade items shipped out will be things the Poiles saw on their recent trip to Egypt.

So far, the fourth son has escaped involvement but inasmuch as he has just moved to Northern California, it may not be long before he completes this family picture at The Collection.

As a business, it is new to this couple, who "retired" from careers as mortgage bankers. They had lived in Stockton and visited here for many years. Now they live in Carmel and Mrs. Poile says she enjoys the daily drive from the city to their "eclectic store" in the Valley. "I see something new each time," she said. "And the people we have met have been wonderful."

It's refreshing to talk with Ernie Lostrom at Toc of the Town (antiques and gifts). Not only because his recent sale on everything in the shop does not mean he is going out of business — quite the contrary — but also because he is a man who loves to work.

The shop, in the May Court (Mission north of Sixth) has the ambience of a grandmother's attic. There are antique clocks and watches, dolls, mirrors, scales of all kinds and unusual postcards. Some antique furniture, too, including furniture for children.

The sale was designed for a particular purpose: to "spark up" some local business. "Most of my customers have been from Southern California," Lostrom said. "I've been here in the court just since February and wanted local people to know where I am."

The emphasis is on "local." Lostrom believes his new location tends to bring only serious buyers — local residents and the occasional tourist who can take the time to look carefully for what he wants. That is in contrast to his earlier Carmel location — in the Plaza — and he likes it that way. It also means that some of the time he can quietly pursue the antique clock-repairing business that is a special feature at Toc of the Town.

When I asked Lostrom if he had any "outside" interests he laughed and said, "No, this is it! Even when I am on vacation I look for antiques. It gets in the blood."

Fortunately, Lostrom's wife, Valerie, shares her husband's enthusiasm and is a partner in the many expeditions to antique stores up and down California and elsewhere. Her regular job is with Monterey Savings, here in Carmel.

I caught up with James Groves at his new place of business: the Village Market. As reported in this column last week, he and his wife Gloria, bought the corner market (Dolores and Eighth) from Tom Sweeney.

There will be few changes at the market, which was refurbished inside and out by Sweeney when he bought it a year ago. "Nothing major," Groves said, "but every business shows an individual." Unique, certainly, are the new wall decorations . . . old wooden-shafted golf clubs Groves has been collecting for years.

Groves is the former owner of Country Club Gate Liquors and Wines in Pacific Grove. He and his wife both expect to be very active in the operation of the Village Market.

As for Sweeney: he has also pulled out of the partnership that owns Bruno's Market and is concentrating on building a motel in Monterey. That's what he enjoys most — the challenge of buying and selling businesses.

Hillside vineyard blamed:

Griffin's name is 'Mud' to neighbors

MERV GRIFFIN may be a lovable, entertaining personality to millions of televison viewers, but to some of his neighbors in Carmel Valley his name is mud.

In fact, that's exactly what oozed down the hillside in Hitchcock Canyon this week from Merv Griffin's property and covered most of one neighbor's property and part of others' land.

The siltation was believed to be from a vineyard under construction since last March on Griffin's ranch off Hitchcock Road. Recent rain storms evidently washed the sand and adobe down a 500-foot ravine onto adjacent properties.

"This man who has said he wants to be a good neighbor is being anything but one," said Grace Donahue, a neighbor who suffered minimal damage but who witnessed the effects of the slide.

Ms. Donahue characterized the event as "a miniature version of the Big Sur mudslide" of a few years ago which followed the Marble Cone fire. She said property owners in the area are "willing to take a class action lawsuit" against Griffin, or the county, or someone.

'I can't take too much more of this; my nerves are getting shot.'

Arthur Wagar's property at the bottom of the ravine below the Griffin property received the brunt of the mudslide. Wagar estimated that some 10 cubic feet of material oozed onto his property.

"It first started two weeks ago when we had our first storm," Wagar said. "All the mud and trash came down. It ran down the hillside and messed up the road.

"When it started to rain Friday, the sand began to come down and it plugged up the drainage culvert that runs across my property."

Wagar said he spent most of Friday night shoveling the deposit out of the culvert to prevent flooding of his home. He spread some of the siltation onto the damaged private roadway, and dispersed some on his property.

Cleanup crews from the Griffin ranch worked Tuesday to clear the deposited mud from the Wagar property, but Wagar remained skeptical about prospects for the future.

"I don't know what I'm going to do about it," he said of the slide. "I can't take too much more of this; my nerves are getting shot."

Marvin Pylate's property was also affected by the mudslide, although the dislodged earth wasn't deposited in any volume on his property. Pylate said the sediment oozed across his property before it came to rest on Wagar's yard.

Pylate estimated that the Griffin vineyard is about 500 feet above the properties at the bottom of the ravine which were affected by the slide.

Steve Borossay, inspector with the Monterey County Building Department, said Merv Griffin obtained a permit to build an access road to his ranch, but indicated no permit was required for the vineyard.

James Beauregard of Santa Cruz is the contractor who is installing the 4,000-vine vineyard, Borossay said.

The county advised Griffin in a Nov. 3 letter about potential erosion problems on his property, and the contractor has agreed to install erosion-control devices on the slopes of the property.

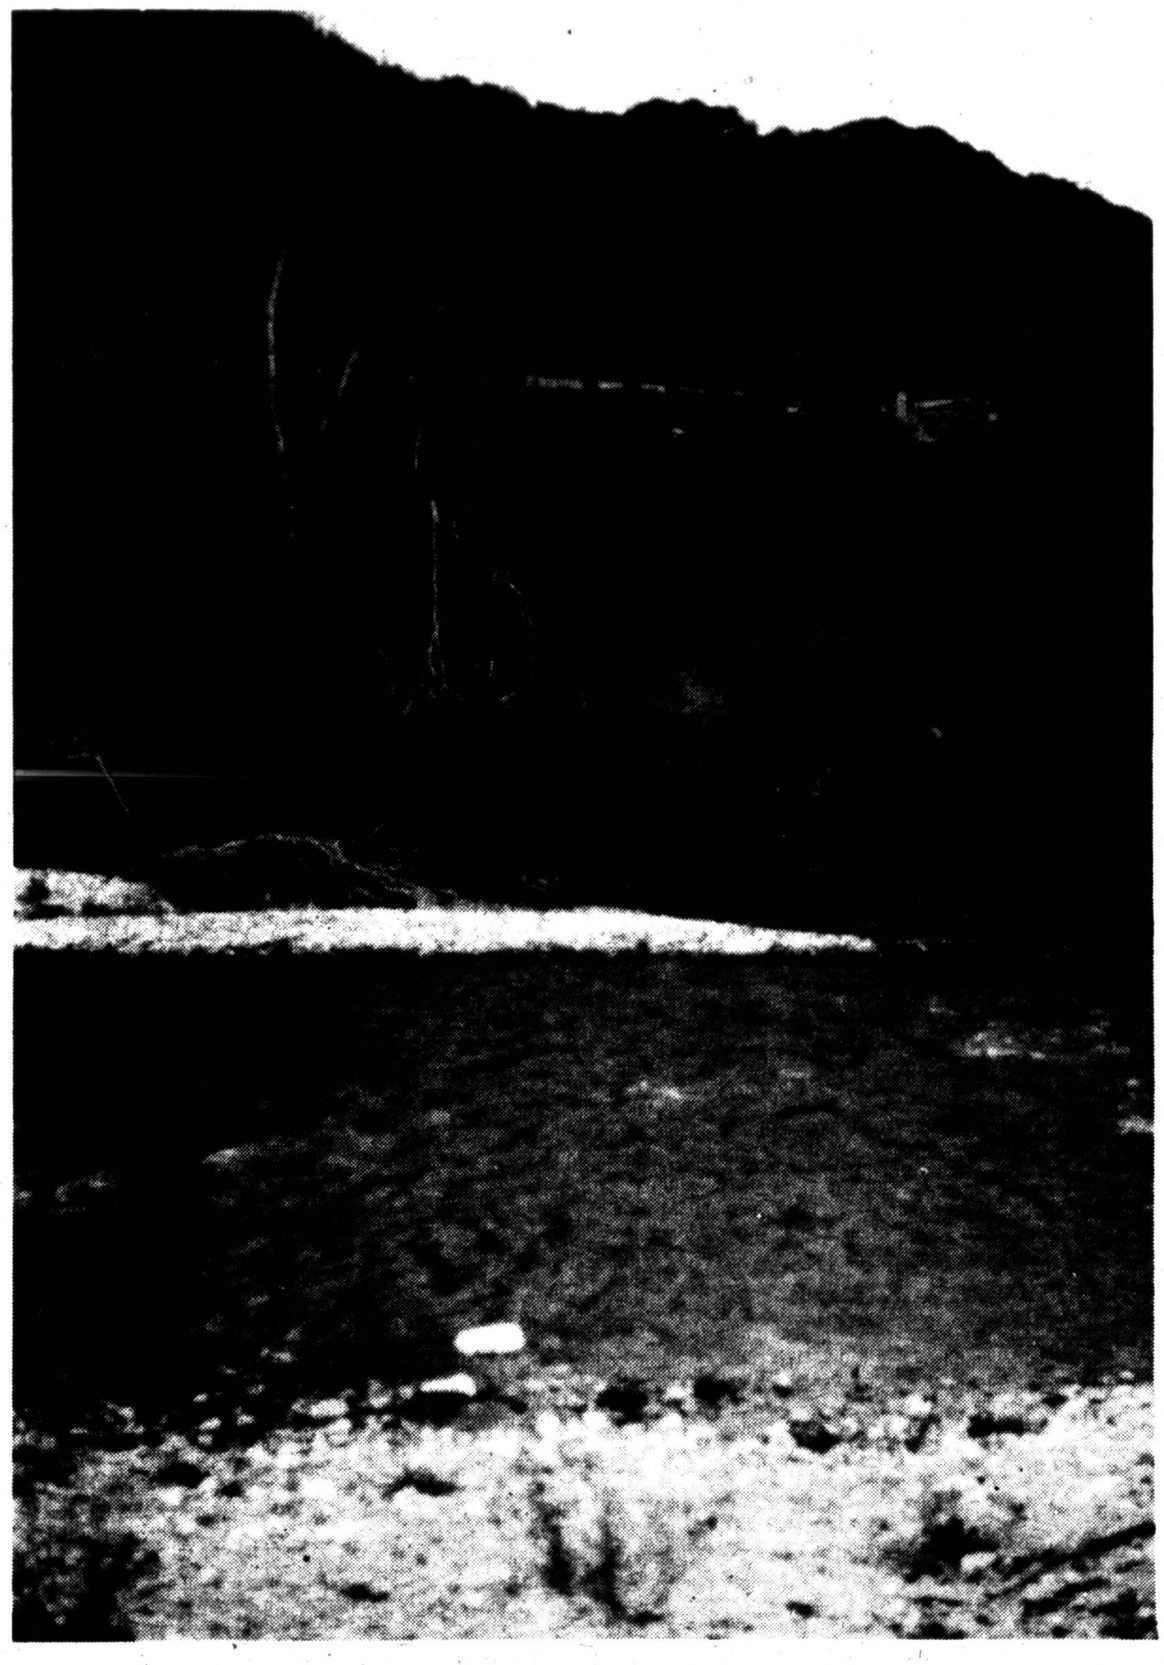
These include netting to retain the soils and straw to promote fast growth of grass seed, which will stabilize the topsoil, Borossay indicated.

"The grass seed has already been planted," he said. "The owner has already contacted an engineering firm to see about installation of culverts to control the erosion.

"I think they went ahead a little too fast with the vineyard planting and didn't anticipate the early rains. It could happen again if it's going to rain again. In two weeks to a month, the situation should be under control."

VINEYARD under construction at Merv Griffin's ranch in Hitchcock Canyon in Carmel Valley is believed by neighbors to be the source of a mudslide during the latest series of rain storms which deposited large amounts of mud, sand and debris on Arthur Wagar's property below the vineyard.

ART WAGAR, whose property received most of the deposit of erosion from the slopes of the Merv Griffin vineyard, surveyed the culvert on his property which became clogged with sediment during the recent rain storm. Wagar said he is tired of worrying about more erosion. (George Smith photo).



River erosion threatens foundations

EROSION of the banks of the Carmel River near the location of concrete foundations concerns the Carmel River Watch, and the environmental organization invited Board of Supervisors Chairwoman Barbara Shipnuck to view the spot this week. Visible near the crest of the bluff is one foundation which CREW estimates to be within 10 feet of the river bank. Erosion damage to the bank from last year's storms is evident. (Robert Miskimon photos).

Shipnuck gathers on-site information

Benefit fashion show a success

By TERRI LEE ROBBE

The rains came, but there was no damper on the luncheon-fashion show held at Corral De Tierra Country Club last Thursday. The affair to benefit the Monterey History and Art Association Costume Collection was presented by the Carmel Plaza Association.

Prior to the showing of the fabulous holiday fashions, the 200 or so guests enjoyed cocktails and a delicious Tahitian salad luncheon.

Mrs. Frank Granito and Mrs. Harry Graham were in charge of arrangements for the luncheon and Phyllis Carminati Hubbard and Jack Hanford (public relations director of Carmel Plaza) co-ordinated the fashion show.

The fashions for both men and women were presented by local people including many professional models from Mrs. Hubbard's Monterey Models Agency in Monterey. Taking to the ramp for a bit of turn-and-twirl were Ms. Diane Stevenson, Vegas Badich, Barbara Koch-Conklin, Judy Bartholomew, Mrs. Sharon Truitt, Ms. Cindy Williams, Merv Sutton, Ms. Martha Dimery, Ms. Margie Heiland, K.C. Stone-Hall, John Kenney, Lori Parker and six year old Kitson Camp, who modeled children's fashions.

Mrs. Hubbard was commentator for the show.

The affair featured a 1920's theme, and drawing much applause was the "flapper" skit performed during intermission. The costumes used in the skit were on loan from Reincarnation.

Door prizes included gift certificates which can be used at any shop in the Carmel Plaza. Two of the certificates were for $50 each and the other four were for $25 each.

Music for the affair was by Bill Boulthouse's Studio 55.

PRIVATE SHOWING OF TREASURES FROM ALEXANDER THE GREAT

The Monterey History and Art Association is arranging for members and their guests to attend a private showing of the treasures of Alexander The Great which have been unearthed in Greece over the past eight years.

The show, "The Search for Alexander," will be at the deYoung Museum in San Francisco on Saturday, March 6, 1982.

Mrs. Frederick Stanley, who is in charge of the event, tells me that the show is going to be every bit as exciting as the King Tut exhibition a couple of years ago.

Of special interest will be the gold treasures and gold (death) masks which were made of important people of that era. Some of the treasures were found in Thessolonica where Alexander's kingdom (and his father's before him) was centered. The show will tour various museums throughout the United States beginning this month and continuing through March, 1982.

Those wishing further information should call Mrs. Stanley or the Monterey History and Art Association, 372-2608.

CARMELITES CHECK IN WITH HOME

This has been "letter week", including a delightful note from Doris Day in Beverly Hills. Beautiful Doris is deserting her big city digs for her spacious ranch in Carmel Valley, and that means a gigantic move which is now in process. Doris, who has her own pet foundation, will now have plenty of room for her beloved pets, and as soon as she gets settled she's going to chat with us about her pet foundation.

Welcome home, Doris!

Belmont Squier writes from Washington, D.C. to say that he's having a great visit with his sister, Patricia, and her family. After seeing the sights of the big city he plans to "Greyhound" through Virginia and North Carolina. After the Christmas holidays, Belmont will be heading home to Carmel and he readily admits that although he's only been gone about six weeks — he's homesick!

And last but not least, this week's mail brought a nice letter from Georgia and "Jake" Jacobsen. Not only did they have a good "winning streak" in Las Vegas — they're thinking of giving up their Woodland Hills home and making the big move to Carmel — to stay!

DON IS GAINING GROUND AND FEELING PERKY

Good word from Don Hamilton who has been in Community Hospital for the past four weeks is that he's feeling better than he has in years, and that the feared surgery is now a definite "no-go."

They're taking care of things with antibiotics now, and if Don continues to improve, he'll be out of the short-white-gowns in just a few more days. In the meantime he's getting a long-needed rest.

CELEBRATION PARTY FOR BOB AND BERNICE LITTLE

Bob and Bernice Little of Carmel celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with a gala in the Sunset room of the LaPlaya Hotel on Sunday, Nov. 8. The affair was given by the Little's four sons — Robert, Matthew, Larry and Kenneth, all of Carmel and Carmel Valley.

About 100 friends and relatives of the couple attended the affair including the sons' wives, Dottie, Joan, Elizabeth and Roxanne, and also some of the Littles' grandchildren.

The Littles honeymooned in Carmel in 1941 and established their first business, Carmel Insurance, in 1948. They also own Simpson's Restaurant and Carmel Sands Lodge. Their four sons work in the various businesses.

Guests were hosted to a delicious variety of hot and cold hors d'oeuvres, champagne and a very special anniversary cake baked by the Littles' eldest grandchild, Christy.

Congratulations Bob and Bernice!

TEACHER RAY STUMBO RECEIVES RECOGNITION FROM D.A.R.

It's no secret that Ray Stumbo loves his job teaching American History at Carmel High School. And with that in mind, what could be nicer than the fact that Ray recently received the award for Outstanding Teacher of 1981 from the Commodore Sloat Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution?

Ray's wife, Jean, accepted the award for him at the recent Chapter meeting held at St. John's Chapel in Monterey.

Ray joined the teaching staff at Carmel High in September 1958, having previously resided in Oregon. His AB and MA degrees are from the University of California, Berkeley.

The granting of the award given to Ray is new this year to the D.A.R. The purpose of the award is to recognize a teacher who has the ability to create in his students a deep understanding and appreciation of American History.

Having visited 48 of the 50 states, Ray brings a first hand knowledge of his United States and its history to class. He also brings a vast collection of slides, movies, tapes, pop quizzes, essay exams, discussion and lecture material.

The idea for the award was initiated at the national level of the D.A.R., and local chapters across America are encouraged to participate in the program by choosing an outstanding teacher of American History from the community.

The local committee for choosing Ray Stumbo was headed by Chapter Historian Mrs. Roger B. Barnes. Chapter Regent Mrs. Harry F.H. Jones made the presentation.

ALLEN FUNT BENEFIT SHOWS MOST SUCCESSFUL

"Candid Camera" fans were out en masse for the two benefit shows presented by Allen Funt in behalf of FOCUS (Friends of Carmel Unified Schools) at Sunset Center last Saturday evening.

Allen did a terrific job of narrating the various film clips from past "Candid Camera" movies and television shows as well as recent footage of local school children. Chuckles, giggles and hearty laughter echoed through the audience during the entire show and following each segment Allen gave the audience the opportunity to ask questions.

With the exception of the recent footage of local school children, the clips were in black and white, but this in no way affected the humor. All the clips were hilarious, but two in particular had the audience in stitches — one showed the participant trying to decorate cakes as they passed down a conveyor line. The person was shown three buttons with the instructions that one button would slow the line down, another speed it up and a third would stop it. Naturally the buttons didn't work, and no matter how hard the person worked there was no stopping the cakes from piling up and tumbling to the floor as the participant stared in wild-eyed wonder.

The other especially funny segment was of a New York policeman directing traffic — he danced, sang and mimicked through the job and even applauded drivers who managed to obey his directions.

Proceeds from the show haven't been totaled at this point, but Bob Giraudo, chairmen of the event, said it looks as if the total will range somewhere in the $12,000 bracket.

Bob's committee included Pat Sippel, tickets; Lacy Faia,

Court forces impact report on intersection project

MONTEREY COUNTY Superior Court Judge Richard Silver has issued an alternative writ of mandate to force the Board of Supervisors to prepare an environmental impact report on the Robinson Canyon Road-Carmel Valley Road intersection project before it proceeds.

Judge Silver granted the request of Carmel Valley attorneys Alexander Henson and Richard Rosenthal in a petition filed Monday. Hearing on a peremptory writ of mandate was set for 9:30 a.m., Dec. 3.

The action also asks Monterey County Superior Court to order the Board of Supervisors to amend the circulation element of the county's general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan, or the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan before approval for the project is given.

The petition also seeks to order the board to find the intersection project to be consistent with the county's general plan.

The Carmel Valley Road-Robinson Canyon Road intersection project was approved Aug. 18 by the Board of Supervisors. It is a crucial adjunct to further development of the 500-acre Carmel Valley Ranch, since it is the main traffic artery feeding the development.

When the supervisors voted 3-0 to approve the preliminary design of the intersection, they also approved a declaration of negative environmental impact and did not order preparation of an EIR. Fifth District Supervisor William Peters of Carmel Valley abstainted from voting.

Carmel Valley Ranch recently received approval for another 91 units of housing. Landmark Lands — developer of the project — already has received approval for 140 townhouses, a tennis club, golf course, and clubhouse.

Monterey County has a letter of credit for $3.2 million from the developer to finance reconstruction of the intersection. An agreement between the developer and the county requires that intersection construction work commence immediately following construction of the first 160 housing units.

Deputy County Counsel Jose Ramos has interpreted this to mean construction can start no later than June of 1982, and possibly as early as January.

The petition asserts that the Board of Supervisors abused its authority by approving the intersection without first ordering an EIR, and alleges that the intersection project would cause environmental and public harm.

INTERSECTION of Robinson Canyon Road and Carmel Valley Road can not be reconstructed if a lawsuit which challenges the Board of Supervisors' approval of the project succeeds. The action seeks to force the supervisors to have an environmental impact report prepared before any work on the intersection commences. (George Smith photo).

Because the Board of Supervisors approved the intersection project without its inclusion in the circulation element of the county general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan, or the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan, that action "constitutes de facto amendments" to those documents prohibited by state planning guidelines, the lawsuit claims.

THE PETITIONERS claim that the supervisors "abused their discretion" by giving approval to the intersection project without first finding it consistent with the county general plan, the Carmel Valley Master Plan, Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan, or state planning guidelines.

The lawsuit asks the court to set aside the Aug. 18 decision by the Board of Supervisors by issuance of a writ of mandate until an environmental impact report on the intersection project is prepared.

The action further asks that work on the intersection be stayed and that any further action by the Board of Supervisors to permit "action which would thwart the interests" of the petitioner be prevented.

Henson and Rosenthal argue in their petition that the action was brought "to promote the health, safety, and welfare of the petitioner and enhance the natural environment, including the preservation of the scenic, esthetic, historical, and recreational potential of Carmel Valley.

"The adoption of then project at issue herein may have a significant adverse environmental effect because of the growth-inducing impacts that the interchange wwill have in that specific area of Carmel Valley."

Approval and construction of the intersection will increase economic pressures for buildout at Rancho San Carlos, about fives miles south of Carmel Valley Ranch, the petition argues. That project is anticipated to house 38,000 persons.

Other growth-inducing effects of the intersection could be felt from development of the planned 200-unit Richard Pryor subdivision, about one-fourth mile south of the intersection on Carmel Valley Road.

"The cumulative effect of these two projects may significantly and adversely affect water quality, both surface and ground water, of the Valley, loss of wildlife habitat and the loss of open spaces, increase in noise and traffic, energy use and air pollution, and other growth-inducing effects," the lawsuit states.

The action was filed Monday in Monterey County Superior Court.

'Let's do something,' says new Carmel River Watch Chairwoman

"I'M SICK of talk, and I'm sick of studies. Let's do something."

That's the rallying cry of Darby Worth of Carmel Valley as she contemplates her chairmanship of the Carmel River Watch for the coming year.

Mrs. Worth was named chairman of the non-profit organization last week, as a new slate of directors was installed. Carmel River Watch is a citizen volunteer group dedicated to the study and preservation of the Carmel River.

Rich Hughett will serve as past chairman; Dorothy Stevens as secretary, and Richard Dalsemer as treasurer. Directors at large for 1982 are Dick Heuer, Karin Strasser-Kauffmann, Anne McGowan, Glen Chang, and Pat Bernardi.

"There have been innumerable studies of the river, in the past and in the present," Mrs. Worth said. "I don't want Carmel River Watch to be just a self-perpetuating, do-nothing organization.

"We have a paralysis of analysis, and now we need some action."

One of the first things Mrs. Worth hopes to get some action on is a program to restore riparian vegetation on the Carmel River. Replacement and maintenance of healthy stream bank vegetation is generally viewed as crucial to control of erosion.

Carmel River Watch will work closely with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to plan a comprehensive riparian vegetation management program, Mrs. Worth said.

The organization will also focus its energies on the need for irrigation of land which surrounds the Scarlett and Stanton wells in Carmel Valley operated by the California-American Water Co. Carmel River Watch will also continue to monitor problems of siltation below the Los Padres reservoir, Mrs. Worth said.

In-school talks on ecology of the Carmel River and water conservation will continue, and Carmel River Watch will attempt to put together a handbook for riverfront property owners on protection of their property against erosion damage.

The regular river walks will continue, and Carmel River Watch also plans to present an evening of films on the Carmel River in conjunction with the Friends of Harrison Memorial Library for Earth Day in April, Mrs. Worth said.

DARBY WORTH of Carmel Valley has been named chairwoman of the Carmel River Watch for 1982.

Gabriel Joseph Gilder

Taking center stage at the Carmel home of Peter and Lois Gilder is Master Gabriel Joseph who was born at Community Hospital Oct. 15 at 2 p.m.

Baby Gabriel is the first child for the Gilders, and he's basking in all the attention he's receiving.

His grandparents are Mrs. Minnie Gilder of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watson of Pacific Grove.

Gabriel weighed in at 7 pounds, 2 ounces and was 20 inches long. He has big, blue eyes, and unlike either of his parents, he has lots of red hair.

The baby's parents own and operate a business called Arts and Designs of Japan.

Gabriel likes to kick up a fuss, but his mom says he loves to ride in the car. His parents also play a lot of tennis, and Gabriel is perfectly content to snooze in his bassinet on the sidelines of the tennis court.

Right now, dad is the family's chief cook and bottle washer, and according to Lois, he's not too shabby in the diaper department either.

Will Gabriel have a brother or sister one of these days?

"It's much too soon to think about that," said Lois. "Right now we really have our hands full."

Laurel Elizabeth Whisler

Keeping things lively at the Carmel home of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Whisler is little Miss Laurel Elizabeth who was born at Community Hospital on Sept. 24 at 3 p.m.

Laurel weighed 8 pounds, 13 ounces at birth and was 20 inches long. She has brown hair and eyes.

The baby's grandparents are Francis Whisler of San Raphael and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Forzani of Monterey.

Laurel was also welcomed by her two-year-old sister, Lindsey, who thinks she is a "living doll."

Laurel's dad is a foreman for the Riley Ranch, and her mother says she is a "domestic engineer," and has her hands full taking care of her husband and children. Dad also helps out with the many chores, and spends as much time as possible with Lindsey so that she won't feel she's being neglected in favor of her new sister.

Welcome Laurel Elizabeth!

Wesley Joseph Moore

William and Kathi Moore of Carmel are delighted with the arrival of their new son, Wesley Joseph, who checked in Nov. 2 at Community Hospital.

Wesley was born at 3:18 p.m. and weighed 8 pounds, 6 ounces. He was 21 inches long, and his mom says he has jet black hair and dark blue eyes that she's sure will turn brown.

The baby's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William Moore of Carmel, Mrs. William Knox of Seaside and Richard J. O'Fahey of Carmel.

Also helping out with the many chores that arrive with a new baby is Wesley's great grandma on his mom's side of the familiy — Rena Newman.

And welcoming Wesley into the family is his half-brother, Willie, who says he's been waiting "forever" for a brother.

Wesley's parents both work for the Navy Exchange, and mom, who took a few months off to spend with the new baby, will be back on the job come January.

And, according to Wesley's mom, he's "good, quiet and beautiful." So much so in fact that she's hoping to give Wesley a little brother or sister in the not too distant future.

Welcome to the world, Wesley Joseph!

CHRONIC PAIN

If you are the unfortunate victim of chronic pain, or one of those told you will just have to learn to live with aches and pains... Clinical studies indicate that nothing could be further from the truth. Most victims of pain could be helped if they were less willing to accept pain on a permanent basis. Dramatic results are now achieved without the use of conventional drugs or surgery.

Father Farrell's wisdom

'. . . be like a good sounding bell'

INVOCATION TO THE CARMEL ROTARY CLUB NOVEMBER 4, 1981

Today, on the feast of Carmel's patron saint, San Carlos de Barremeo, we humbly ask thee, oh almighty God, to help us to become aware that thy design for the world is love in action and we may strive to give our lives in service to others, unselfishly.

Most members of Carmel Rotary remember with affection the Reverend Father Charles H. "Chuck" Stacy who was assistant priest at All Saints' and an active and involved member of this club.

Several years ago he became pastor of St. Mark's-in-the-Valley, Solvang. Despite the fact that this is a Danish Lutheran enclave, he is now a member of the Solvang-Buellton Split Pea Rotary Club.

Chuck and his parishoners have built a new church at Los Olivos. He sends me his parish bulletin called the "Roar of the Lion" which reports how they have blessed a bell as a memorial to 19-year-old Gordon Thomas Jones, who died Oct. 6.

Bells have a long and honorable tradition in the Church. From early times they rang out for the Angelus; on feast days and festival occasions; to call the faithful to worship and to remind men to pray for the dead.

The Carmel Rotary has always had a presidential bell used to call the meeting to order and to close the weekly sessions. Our bell has had an adventuresome history. It has been hijacked, kidnapped and misappropriated by members with juvenile minds; but despite all these vicissitudes the bell has survived and still rings with authority.

Oh, Lord, help us to be like a good sounding bell, rich-toned, always ringing in tune and never flat, cracked or cacophonous. Finally, Oh Lord, when we depart from this vale of tears, may bells toll in sorrow, not ring out in joy. Amen.

Pianist Collard returns to Carmel with performance of French music

Pianist Jean-Philippe Collard, whose piano artistry delighted a Carmel audience two years ago, returns to Sunset Theater at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24 with a program of predominantly French music.

He will play the popular Suite Bergamasque by Debussy, the Barcarolle No. 9 of Faure and two pieces from the canon of 20 Regards for the infant Jesus by Messiaen. He will conclude the recital with the Liszt Sonata No. 2.

At 33, Collard is no longer green but a mature artist of extraordinary skill and distinction, to judge from what the critics say about him.

"...An artist of the greatest promise, blessed with immense power and awesome control of the keyboard," wrote The Washington Star critic.

"Unfailingly beautiful tone and considerable range of tonal nuance..a pianist of marked lyric gifts and not like anyone else," said The Boston Globe.

"He is very tall, with immensely long fingers which enable him to use the sustaining pedal sparingly and achieve effects of clarity and precision reminiscent of Rachmaninoff himself," wrote The London Sunday Times.

Even more flattering than the critical praise Collard has received are the comparisons with Sviatoslav Richter, Vladimir Horowitz and other pianistic greats. Beside a full concert schedule, Collard has also made records, and last year won a Gramophone Record Award for his recording of the Ravel Piano Concerto in G Major with The French National Orchestra.

Tickets for the concert are $7, $8 and $9, depending on seat location. Jean-Philippe Collard's appearance is sponsored by The Carmel Music Society. Season tickets are available. For more information phone 372-1226.

THE BOYISH GOOD LOOKS of pianist Jean-Philippe Collard belie a mature mastery of the keyboard that has the critics comparing Collard with Richter, Horowitz and Rachmaninoff. Collard will play Liszt, Debussy, Faure and Messiaen at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. Tickets are $7, $8 and $9.

Sunset sponsors homecrafters fair

An event not far removed from a medieval market day — when farmers brought fresh produce to the village square and cottage folk sold the simple fruits of their labors — will take place from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21 in the central parking lot at Sunset Center, Carmel.

Homecrafters Marketplace is a forum for non-professionals to sell their homemade crafts, art or other gift articles in an open-air festival that brings buyers and sellers together in a community-flavored event.

The sponsor of the event, Carmel's Community and Cultural Center, emphasizes that only bona fide, state-certified non-profit groups or individuals who as a hobby or part-time activity do crocheting, knitting, sewing, painting, sculpting or drawing or some other craft are eligible to enter.

The amateur character of Homecrafters Marketplace is what makes the event unique, and sponsors are determined to keep professionals and commercially produced products away at the point of a pitchfork, if necessary.

Those who qualify for one of about 60 spaces at the festival must fill out a registration form at Sunset Center and pay a $3 fee. Carmel residents will be given preference for spaces, but non-residents may also apply.

Public invited to talk on native plants

Nursery owner Michael Smith will give an illustrated talk on propagating native plants at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20 in the library of Carmel High School. The occasion is the annual meeting of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society. The public is welcome.

As a youth, Smith worked at his parents' nursery in Santa Rosa. After taking political science degrees at the University of California and Johns Hopkins University, he decided that plants are more interesting than politics, after all, and became manager of a Watsonville nursery.

In 1978, Smith and his brother began Evergreen Nursery, a wholesale dealership that specializes in growing California natives for the nursery trade.

Gardeners interested in using native plants will find his talk informative and interesting. There will be an opportunity to buy some native bulbs for a colorful addition to your garden next spring. For more information phone 373-4562.

Republican women to hear Paul Gann

Paul Gann, active foe of government spending, crime and other evils, will speak to The Carmel Republican Women's Club at 11:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at The Lodge at Pebble Beach. The public is invited.

Gann, variously famed and reviled as co-author of Proposition 13, is also president of People's Advocate, a government watchdog group, and Chairman of the Citizens Committee to Stop Crime.

He will speak on "The Victim's Bill of Rights."

The event begins with no-host cocktails at 11:30 a.m. and proceeds to lunch at 12:30. The cost is $10.50 per person, which includes lunch. For reservations phone 624-2654, 624-7209 or 625-0484.

Music Corner

Symphony concert ends on happy note

By LYN BRONSON

As the Monterey County Symphony prepared to unveil its second program of the season at King Hall in Monterey last Sunday night there were three ominous events occurring simultaneously.

A violent Pacific storm was predicted for that same evening and Symphony patrons arriving at the hall had come prepared for the event.

A fire had broken out in a lab adjacent to King Hall at the Naval Postgraduate School, and thus concert-goers expecting a nasty storm were arriving during the confusion of flashing emergency lights, fire alarm klaxons and yellow-slickered firemen rushing back and forth with fire fighting equipment.

And lastly, there was the lingering controversy about the unfavorable critical reception accorded the Monterey County Symphony's first program the previous month.

I am happy to report that the rains failed to materialize; the fire was quickly controlled; and Mr. Taeuber showed that he is perfectly capable of bringing order and discipline to the Monterey County Symphony.

This is not to say that it was a perfect evening, for there were problems of intonation, attack and balance between sections of the orchestra. And there is also the lingering impression that the programming is ambitious to the point where rehearsal time is barely adequate to the task at hand.

But, for the most part, we were treated to a much more successful evening. Right from the first notes of Reznicek's overture to Donna Diana the string section tripped along with a light and airy precision, setting a delightful mood which was sustained throughout the overture. Although this work is not often heard it serves as a most charming curtain raiser.

What followed was what seemed like the slowest performance I have ever heard of Strauss' tone poem on Don Quixote. The tempo was slow and the texture so thick that it sometimes obscured the soloists David Stein, the orchestra's principal cellist, and guest violist, Susan Bates.

Again, the strings played with authority as did the augmented brass and wind sections. David Stein was a very satisfying soloist displaying a rich, smooth sound and the skill to shape a melodic line beautifully. Unfortunately Miss Bates was so often overwhelmed by the orchestral texture that she was very difficult to hear.

Toward the end of the Strauss, Mr. Taeuber pulled the ensemble together so that the last few variations were very effective indeed. During the intermission much comment was heard in the lobby about the "wind machine" rented for the occasion — as interesting a novelty now as it must have been when first introduced.

After intermission Mr. Taeuber presented selections from Wagner's Ring Cycle, Funeral Music from Gotterdammerung, Ride of the Valkyries, Wotan's Farewell and the Magic Fire Music.

The Funeral Music and the Ride of the Valkyries made an excellent effect, as they usually do, but one constantly wished for a more focused balance so that important motives were not swamped by the supporting texture.

Bass-baritone John Robert Dunlap appeared as soloist in Wotan's Farewell. Displaying a powerful, rich voice with excellent diction, he held his own against a powerful orchestra in a large hall.

And thus the Symphony's second concert of the season ended on a much happier note than the previous concert.

Brown Bag films today

Two films will be shown at 1 p.m. today in Carpenter Hall, Sunset Center as part of the Center's Brown Bag Series. Patrons of the free show are invited to bring a brown bag lunch to the Center's Chapman Room at noon for some conversation before the movies.

The first film, Mirror of America, is a documentary of city and rural life in this country from 1914 until 1929. It was culled from 1,800,000 feet of film donated to the National Archives from the Ford collection, and focuses on the introduction of the automobile to American life.

Film number two is Art Heritage, the first film ever made about New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art. The camera spans the history of man as reflected in his art. In color.

No reservations are required. For more information phone 624-3996.

Backgammon

Get your board ready

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

You, White, roll 2-1 in the diagrammed position. How do you play it?

The game is hopeless unless you can hit a blot at a time when you have a fine home board. Therefore you must get your board ready, and it is imperative to take the two by moving from your 6-point to your 4-point.

After you have thus started your 4-point you should improve your chance to make the point by moving from your 9-point to your 8-point.

You are delighted to roll so small a number since it allows you to maintain your position in Black's inner and outer boards while you improve your position in your own inner board.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

'Dear Liar' to Hartnell

Dear Liar, Jerome Kilty's bittersweet biography about George Bernard Shaw and Mrs. Patrick Campbell, his platonic lover, moves from Cherry Hall in Carmel to the Hartnell College Studio Theater for two days only. Curtain for this splendid literary evening is at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 20 and 21.

The two-act play is based on 40 years of correspondence between Shaw and Mrs. Campbell, who was one of the great actresses of her day. The reciting of letters back and forth across the stage might have assumed a tennis match character had not Kilty provided ample dialogue for continuity. Still, action sometimes lags, and it is only the play's magnificent language that maintains interest.

This is spoken beautifully by Florence Larsen as Mrs. Campbell and Jim Jensen as Shaw, who have both committed huge chunks of sometimes baroque Victorian prose to memory.

The theater is located at 156 Homestead Ave., Salinas. Tickets are $3 and $2 for students. For reservations phone 624-7491.

Manuscripts are sought

If you, like many Carmelites, have a desk drawer stuffed with some of the great unpublished literature of our time, here's a chance to be rid of some of it.

Reed magazine, the arts and literary journal of San Jose State University, is soliciting prose, poetry, photographs and artwork for its 36th annual edition.

There is no pay, but the warm glow of publication may follow your submission to Reed magazine, English Department, San Jose State University, San Jose, California 95192. Include a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

The deadline for submissions is Wednesday, Nov. 25. For more information phone 1-277-2817.

Gifted pianist to perform Saturday

The lovely and gifted young pianist Ingrid Jacoby will appear in recital at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21 at Sunset Theater, Carmel.

Highlight of the evening will be Miss Jacoby's performance of Mussorgsky's Pictures at an Exhibition, a highly popular orchestral work that was originally written for piano. The piece ends in a series of great, crashing chords that call for virtuoso technique.

Also on the program will be works by Mozart, Debussy, and Chopin.

Miss Jacoby has won several piano competitions, including the Young Concert Artist Guild Award, and made her debut in Carnegie Hall under the Guild's auspices. She was a finalist in the Carmel Music Society's Young California Artist Competition last spring and was one of the featured performers at the Fritz Wurzmann Memorial Concert at Sunset Center in June.

Her appearance is the first in a new series of Bronson Concerts called Young Keyboard Artists.

Early next year pianists Panayis Lyras and Santiago Rodriguez will continue the series.

Tickets for these recitals are $8 for a single performance, $4 for students and $20 for the series. For more information phone 625-0797.

PIANIST INGRID JACOBY will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21 at Sunset Center, Carmel. The prize-winning young artist will play several works, including the monumental Pictures at an Exhibition by Mussorgsky. Tickets are $8 and $4 for students, available at the Center box office.

Coast art group to hear Stone

Carmel artist Bill Stone, who also teaches art at Carmel High School, will demonstrate his techniques for watercolors and collages at the monthly meeting of The Central Coast Art Association, 7:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 23 in Rm.10 of Sunset Center, Carmel.

Stamp dealers gather in Carmel

Fifteen stamp dealers from several western states will gather at the Holiday Inn, Hwy. 1 and Rio Rd., this weekend in order to display and sell stamps from all over the world.

Hours for the free, public show are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21 and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 22.

Stamps worth from pennies to thousands of dollars will be exhibited. There will also be a "foreign post office" offering new issues of Germany, the Netherlands, China and other countries at face value.

Gift certificates will be given to the first 20 people through the door each day. There will also be door prizes.

Petpourri

Thy neighbor's dog

By JUDITH A. EISNER

ONE OF THE hardest things for pet owners to understand, it seems, is that there is no eleventh commandment stating "Thou shalt love thy neighbor's dog." Lack of consideration on the part of pet owners for the peace, tranquility and personal property of others is a major cause of the ill will which more and more tends to split the pet owners and non-pet-owners into two distinct camps in both city and country.

We who own animals are willing to tolerate certain disruptions in our lives: puppyish or kittenish destruction, feeding schedules, heat periods, vet bills, delayed vacations, dug-up gardens, and dog-walking being just a random sampling. We tolerate these things because we feel that the pleasures of owning a pet outweigh, most of the time, the pains; and we tend to wax insensitive to the objections of other people who do not care to join us.

If every pet owner kept an awareness of the "other side" in mind at all times, things might be far pleasanter for everyone.

The classic example is the pet owner's belief that his pet "has the right" to roam. There are, of course, many people who love their cats and dogs too much to take the risk involved — risk that include being smashed on the highways, stolen, lost, injured, poisoned or even, in extreme cases, shot. (In an agricultural area such as Monterey County, there are laws that permit any farmer or rancher to shoot any animal he deems to be molesting his livestock.)

But, judging from the number of cats and dogs "on the prowl," the majority of pet owners turn their animals out and think little of it. If they are aware of their pets' doings, they justify these actions in some way.

For example: at a well-kept shopping center, attractively planted and maintained, the sidewalks are fouled several times a day by loose-running dogs. And several times a day, disgusted and enraged shoppers suffer the consequences.

Another example concerns the homeowner who is as devoted to gardening as the pet owner is to his pup. And he feels as homicidal towards that pup who digs up his rose bushes and relieves himself on the manicured lawn as does the pet owner toward a proven dog poisoner.

Just as your rights cease at the point where they infringe on another's, so do the "rights" of your pets. Your dog has a right to bark, certainly. But when his barking keeps neighbors in several houses awake far into the night, his right to bark suddenly oversteps its limits.

And similarly, your pet's right to roam reaches it farthest limits where he commits destruction on the property of others. That rose bush may not mean much to you, but you should be able to understand its meaning to someone else.

It is perfectly "normal" for a tom cat to go out seeking a mate; it is equally normal for him to spend the night splitting the stillness with unearthly screeches. But to the neighbors, including the one who's keeping his female cat indoors, it's not normal; it's an unbearable, sleep-destroying lack of consideration on the part of that tom cat's owners.

Few of us want to resort to the courts to decide these matters. The law does hold the owner of an animal responsible for its actions, but you must go to court to get a decision and recoup your losses. Aside from the lack of neighborly feeling a lawsuit induces, the cost of a rose bush or two is usually far less than court costs. So there's very little comfort — or practicality — in that "responsibility" ordinance.

There is, however, a leash law that applies to the unincorporated areas of Monterey County even as there are city ordinances for the cities. Loose-running animals are subject to impounding, and there are steep fines to be paid when you "bail out" your pet. (If he's unlicensed, there will also be license fees to be paid.)

There are several obvious answers to controlling your pets. If you own a dog, you should have some provision for his outdoor freedom within a limited area. If you cannot fence your entire property, perhaps you can fence off a "run" for the dog; at very least, you can string a line between two posts or trees, afix a light chain to the line and permit the dog running room while keeping him on your property. Or walk him on a leash.

There is no easy remedy to the cat problem. You can and should neuter or spay your cats to prevent unwanted kittens. This will also put a stop to the cat calls that announce a female in heat. But it will not prevent damage to neighbor's flower beds by a cat "toileting" there. We have heard more disgruntled gardeners lamenting this destruction than one would ordinarily realize. You might be able to overcome it by training, or by making the cat use an indoor litter box.

If you keep your dog confined, not only is it much safer for him, but it's much safer for you, too. Even the friendliest dog, when excited, can nip a child, and that could lead to a lawsuit. Many dogs become hysterical at the sight of a horse and will chase after it, nipping at its legs. More potential accidents, with more probable lawsuits.

Dog fights are another hazard that confront the unconfined dog, and dog fights often lead to high vet bills — both your own and the bills for your neighbor's dog who got chewed up by yours!

In the long run, planning for an average life expectancy of 10 years per dog, it's cheaper to build that fence now.

For the disgruntled neighbors, we suggest that you bring his pet's actions to the attention of the pet owner. Very often, you will get a response not unlike the parent when told of his child's misbehavior. "Why didn't you tell me?" is the familiar reaction. But all too often, we are hesitant to confront people with the facts. Usually, you will find the pet owner eager to solve the problem and retain good neighborly relations.

P.G. Art Center show opens Fri.

The Pacific Grove Art Center will present a three-man show from Friday, Nov. 20 through Dec. 12 at the Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove.

Actually, it's a one-man, two-woman show, with Carmel artist Carol Chapman exhibiting in the Main Gallery, artist Donna Catotti in the E.H. Dyke Gallery and photographer Richard Whittaker in the Photography Gallery. A free and public reception will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday for all three exhibitors.

Chapman, primarily a portrait painter, will show paintings from her "Beach Series," which concentrates on beach chairs, the human figure and the sea. The work in this show was done in Europe, New York and Carmel, where the artist maintains her present studio.

Chapman was educated at Smith College and The Kansas City Art Institute. She will sign a limited number of posters at the opening of this exhibit.

Donna Catotti lives and works in the High Sierra and travels regularly to canyons in the Southwest for her subject matter. For the Art Center show she will present works in several media, including watercolors, drawings, woodblock and serigraph prints.

Photographer Whittaker shot most of the photographs for the show during early morning hours at San Francisco International Airport. Disdaining human subjects for the most part, he concentrates on inanimate objects such as a broken telephone, and manages to find humor in the mundane.

After the Friday evening reception, regular gallery hours of from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday will apply. For more information phone 375-2208.

Glass, ceramics featured at Orange Cloud Gallery

Orange Cloud Gallery, which specializes in fine glass and ceramic artwork, is having a five-artist show from Saturday, Nov. 21 through January. There will be a reception at the Gallery, 329 Ocean Ave., Monterey, from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday.

The main exhibitor will be Michael Gustavson, some of whose large raku vessels have doubled in price since they sold for $200 to $500 at a Los Altos show two years ago. The blown glass forms of Paula Krager will also be on display, as will the salt-glazed vessels of Joyce Clark-Binin. Other exhibitors are Dolores Dannemiller and Cathe Dietrich.

For more information phone 373-1831.

A SITTING FIGURE from Carol Chapman's Beach Series whiles away the afternoon without so much as a paperback to keep her company. Chapman and two others, artist Donna Catotti and photographer Richard Whittaker, will exhibit their work from Friday, Nov. 20 through Dec. 12 at Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove. There will be a public reception Friday from 7 to 9 p.m.

Former Carmelite returns with show

DeWitt Whistler Jayne, a former resident of Carmel who now lives in the Virgin Islands, returns here Friday, Nov. 20 for a show at New Masters Gallery called Pastels of China.

There will be a reception for Jayne from 3 to 7 p.m. Friday at the Gallery, Sixth Ave. between Dolores and Lincoln, Carmel. The public is invited.

Jayne, at 70 years of age one of our leading realistic painters, has been exhibiting his oil paintings as well as pastels at New Masters for almost eight years. Recently, he has been concentrating on unusually finished renderings in pastel. His unique style, developed over 50 years of fine art, lends itself to the natural beauty that is China.

During his recent trip to China, Jayne focused his attention on the magnificent mountain landscapes of Guilin and the Li-jiang River, areas unexplored by an artist's eye for perhaps a generation.

Internationally famed for his seascapes and paintings of sailing ships, Jayne has also won recognition as a portrait painter with commissioned portraits of John F. Kennedy, Richard Nixon and others. For more information phone 625-1511.

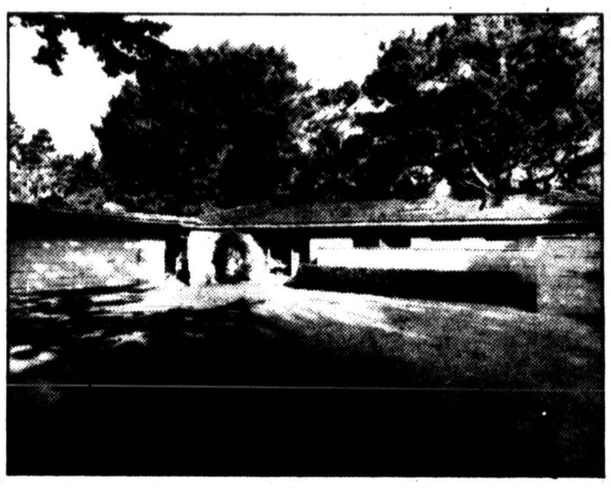
REAL ESTATE

House of Illusion

The front is real enough: a broad, low profile house hugging the terrain, set well back on a large lot, behind a small grove of cypress trees and a graceful, circling drive.



But at the entrance the illusions begin. A head-high Carmel stone wall starts several feet from the door, then continues right through the glass wall. Open the Dutch door and you seem to be looking down a long living room, with low pitched roof, to a great stone fireplace standing outdoors! It isn't. The far wall is glass to the ridge pole and on both sides of the fireplace. More glass forms the west wall, and outside you see trees, flowers, two patios and a small forest extending away to the north.

Turn right from the entrance, and you're in a long corridor with glass on one side, paneling and mirrors on the other, running back to the master bedroom. You're warm and cozy and walking on soft carpets, yet you can't escape the feeling of being outside. On the way, you pass Bedroom No. 2, a sizable chamber which shares a great skylight with its bathroom and looks out to the front (and a secluded patio) through more glass walls.

The master bedroom is at the far end of this hall. Shelves cover the east wall, beams are overhead, glass doors open to the north terrace, and the bath is tucked in under another skylight. Mirrored closet doors deceive you again, making you think space is unlimited, tempting you to feel a wall before you walk into it.

The kitchen is on the other side of the living room, a compact working area with stone wall on one side, glass wall facing front, and windows to the west. Beyond it is a 3rd bedroom and a half-bath. Also an enclosed breezeway which houses the laundry and copious storage space. And just past that, the double garage.

It's about 1850 sq. ft. and feels like 3000. The lot is ¾ acre and backs up to a wild and beautiful greenbelt. It's wonderfully private, yet convenient to shopping, schools and the Mission. The house is on Trevis Way, just off Atherton Drive, and you'd better see it soon. $298,500.
